SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Thomas K. Barnes, wealthy New Yorker, on a walking trip through New England, is caught in a storm which drives him to a small inn. He meets a girl in the same plight. While they discuss the situation an automobile, sent to meet the girl, arrives and Barnes is given a lift to her father's home, which she tells him is a place called Green Fancy.

CHAPTER II—At the tavern Barnes finds a stranger, a man of mysterious appearance, who is interested in him. Barnes becomes interested in the man.

CHAPTER III—As the storm grows, Barnes finds himself in a perilous position. He is rescued by a stranger, who is interested in him. Barnes becomes interested in the man.

CHAPTER IV—He meets "Miss Thackeray," a leading lady of the theatre, who is interested in him. Barnes becomes interested in the man.

CHAPTER V—The wounded man, registered at the tavern as Andrew Paul, dies, and Barnes is informed he must not leave after the incident. O'Dowd and De Soto, guests at Green Fancy, visit the tavern, apparently much mystified over the affair.

CHAPTER VI—Barnes advances Rush-croft money sufficient to release the company from its embarrassing position, thereby becoming its official backer. He visits Green Fancy, and the stranger meets his acquaintance of the night before, finding her a girl of surprising beauty.

CHAPTER VII—She seems not to be desirous of recognizing him, and turns away. O'Dowd appears and in apparently friendly fashion caresses Barnes (who feels he is unwelcome) from the grounds.

CHAPTER VIII—Miss Thackeray warns Barnes that a man stopping at the tavern, ostensibly a book agent, had searched his baggage in his absence. O'Dowd comes to the tavern and with Barnes and others goes over the scene of the previous night's shooting. Barnes is invited to dinner at Green Fancy.

CHAPTER IX—His acquaintance of the storm is introduced as Miss Cameron. The makeup of the house party is changed, and the number of men-servants about the place, somewhat mysteriously, is increased.

CHAPTER X—Miss Cameron informs him she is a prisoner in the house, appealing to him for aid and bidding him to secrecy. In the course of a festive chapter, who drives him back to the tavern, Barnes becomes convinced there is a conspiracy of moment hatching at Green Fancy.

CHAPTER XI—At breakfast the supposed book agent introduces himself as Sprague, a government secret agent. Sprague tells Barnes he is to watch the party at Green Fancy, describing them as refugees from a country overrun by the Germans. He asserts that "Miss Cameron" is a relative of the former ruler of the devastated country and that she or "Loeb" have with them the crown jewels of enormous value, which Sprague would recover.

CHAPTER XII—Barnes agrees to accompany Sprague on a journey to Green Fancy, Sprague with the object of securing the jewels, and Barnes with the hope of rescuing "Miss Cameron."

CHAPTER XIII—They enter the grounds in safety, Sprague overhauling two men evidently on guard. Reaching the house, Sprague sends up, by means of a flying rod carried by Sprague, a note to "Miss Cameron," informing her of their intention to enter the house. She tries to dissuade them, but Sprague climbs to her room and goes through it on a quest for the crown jewels and state papers.

CHAPTER XIV—Barnes becomes uneasy at Sprague's lone absence and follows him, climbing by means of the ivy attached to the wall. While talking to "Miss Cameron," a commotion in the house warns them that Sprague has been detected. Barnes, with "Miss Cameron" clinging to him, makes his escape to the ground. He loses his sense of location and they become lost, finally taking refuge in a small shed. "Miss Cameron" explains how she was deceived by Sprague and what he has done to her. She reveals as a prize of the house to which she belongs. They remain in the darkness by O'Dowd.

He was rougher than he realized in wrenching his arm free. She uttered a low moan and covered her face with her hands. Understated, he crossed to the door. His hand was on the knob when a door slammed violently somewhere in a distant part of the house. A hoarse shout of alarm rang out, and then the rush of heavy feet over thickly carpeted floors.

Barnes acted with lightning swiftness. He sprang to the open window, half-carrying, half-dragging the girl with him.

"Now for it!" he whispered. "Not a second to lose. Climb upon my back, quick, and hang on for dear life." He had scrambled through the window and was lying flat across the sill.

"Hurry! Don't be afraid. I am strong enough to carry you if the vines do their part."

With surprising alacrity and sureness she crawled out beside him and then over upon his broad back, clasping her arms around his neck. Holding to the ledge with one hand he felt for and clutched the thick vine with the other. Slowly he slid his body off of the sill and swung free by one arm. An instant later he found the lattice with the other hand and the hurried descent began.

His feet touched the ground. In the twinkling of an eye he picked her up in his arms and bolted across the little grass plot into the shrubbery. She did not utter a sound.

Presently he set her down. His breath was gone, his strength exhausted.

"Can you—manage to—walk a little way?" he gasped. "Give me your hand, and follow as close to my heels as you can. Better that I should bump into things than you."

Shouts were now heard, and shrill blasts on a police whistle split the air. On they stumbled, blindly, recklessly. He spared her many an injury by taking it himself. More than once she murmured sympathy when he crashed into a tree or floundered over a log. Utterly at sea, he was now guessing at the course they were taking. Whether their frantic dash was leading them toward the Tavern, or whether they were circling back to Green Fancy, he knew not. Panting, he forced onward.

At last she cried out, quaveringly: "Oh, I—I can go no farther! Can't we—is it not safe to stop for a moment? My breath is—"

"God bless you, yes," he exclaimed, and came to an abrupt stop. She leaned heavily against him, gasping for breath. "I haven't the faintest idea where we are, but we must be some distance from the house. We will rest a few minutes and then take it easier, more cautiously. I am sorry, but it was the only thing to do, rough as it was."

"I know, I understand. I am not complaining, Mr. Barnes. You will find me ready and strong and—"

"Let me think. I must try to get my bearings. Good Lord, I wish Sprague were here. He can see in the dark. We are off the path, that's sure."

"Do you think he's escaped?"
